

80 Flowers Bibliography of Sources

The following is a complete list of the sources LZ noted in the draft notebook for 80 Flowers (HRC 12.3), including quite a few miscellaneous loose sheets and cards associated with that notebook. This bibliography is arranged into three sections: I) botanical reference works, II) dictionary and word reference works, and III) literary and other works. In the first two sections, the works are arranged according to frequency of usage and are annotated. Unlike his practice in "A", LZ drew predominantly from reference works for 80 Flowers. None of the works in the literary section are used pervasively, often in just one or sometimes a couple of poems, so these have simply been arranged chronologically (see note appended at end for further remarks on the latter). Where reference sources only appear in one or two instances, page numbers to the draft notebook are added in square brackets.

I - Botanical References

Norman Taylor ed., Taylor's Encyclopedia of Gardening, Horticulture and Landscape Design, 4th ed. (Houghton Mifflin Co., 1961). 1329 pages.

This volume is the single most important source for the botanical information used in 80 Flowers. As the title indicated it is a practical encyclopedia for gardeners which, beyond descriptive information on plant families and genus, includes information and advice on all aspects of gardening.

Gray's Manual of Botany: A Handbook of the Flowering Plants and Ferns of the Central and Northeastern United States and Adjacent Canada, 8th edn. largely rewritten and expanded by Merritt L. Fernald (American Book Co., 1950). lxiv + 1632 pages.

If Taylor's Encyclopedia is applied or practical botany, then this volume is standard technical descriptive botany, a comprehensive compendium of the plants of North America. Organized by botanical families, the descriptions are compressed and technical (Zukofsky often incorporates definitions from the glossary of terms). The only concessions to the dryly descriptive are brief information on the origin of plant names (predominately Greek and Latin), including for species names which Taylor does not provide, and listing common names (including French-Canadian names). Primarily used to augment or complement Taylor.

Everett, T.H., A Guide to Wild Flowers, Field Flowers (Racine, Wis.: Whitman Publ. Co., 1945), 60 pages.

Everett, T.H., A Guide to Wild Flowers, Woodland Flowers (Racine, Wis.: Whitman Publ. Co., 1955), 60 pages.

Compact guidebooks with attractive color illustrations of each plant and succinct descriptions plus cultural tidbits. User friendly and consulted whenever relevant.

Common Weeds of the United States (Dover, 1971) [A Dover reprint of U.S. Dept. of Agriculture, Selected Weeds of the United States, 1970], v + 463 pages.

An identification guide with succinct descriptions, distribution maps and full page drawings of each plant. Mainly used for the weeds in the later 80 Flowers.

Theophrastus, Inquiry into Plants, 2 vols. Trans. Sir A. Hort (Loeb Classical Library, Putnam's Sons, 1916).

A substantial passage in "A"-22.520-521 was composed from this text, often considered the foundational work for the systematic study of botany in the West. This edition has extensive indexes of all plants mentioned in Greek, their Latin equivalents and English colloquial names, so LZ could easily look up whether Theophrastus made mention of any plants he was considering for 80 Flowers. A fair amount of transliterations from the Greek make their way into Zukofsky's poems, as well as miscellaneous details.

Kamm, Minnie Watson, Old Time Herbs for Northern Gardens (78 line drawings + 44 halftones) Dover, 1971.

Chatty entries on herbs and traditional medical plants, including historical and literary mention of plants and their uses. Used occasionally, but not as extensively as one might expect.

Gerard, John. Herball, or Generall Historie of Plantes, enlarged by Thomas Johnson (London, 1633). Edition uncertain.

E.G. Cheyney, What Tree is That? (D. Appleton Century Co., 1940).

As the title indicates, an identification guide to trees, more important in the surviving notes for Gamut: 90 Trees. However, since LZ already had Gamut in mind while working on 80 Flowers, there are various notes indicating that certain material should go into the following work with a few passing references to Cheyney.

Burpee Seed catalog (Pennsylvania).

Park Seed Catalog 1977, Geo W. Park Seed Co (Greenwood, S.C. 29647).

Breck's catalog (bulbs) (Indiana & Holland).

These catalogs, from which the Zukofskys presumably ordered the seeds and bulbs they grew around their Port Jefferson house, provide short descriptions, as well as illustrations.

Nakamura, Zeko, Bonsai Miniatures Quick & Easy (Tokyo, 1975) [p.45].

Bailey, L.H., The Standard Cyclopaedia of Horticulture, 3 vols Macmillan. [edition unknown].

Zukofsky noted that he consulted this work during his five-week residency at Bellagio on Lake Como, Italy in 1972.

II - Dictionaries and Word Reference Books

Century Dictionary: An Encyclopedic Lexicon of the English Language, 10 vols., ed. William Dwight Whitney, 1895.

LZ acquired a set of this American competitor to the OED in the early 1950s, and it was his favorite dictionary in his later years. It especially appealed because of its many historical literary examples, which LZ often noted, and because it includes many obscure, that is, obsolete words and meanings.

Webster's Collegiate Dictionary, 5th ed. (1948 printing).

More up-to-date than the Century. This is a different edition than the Webster's Collegiate LZ used in parts of Thanks to the Dictionary in the early 1930s (3rd edition).

Skeat, Walter W. A Concise Etymological Dictionary of the English Language (Oxford University Press, 1951).

Lewis, Charlton D. & Charles Short, A Latin Dictionary (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1879, 1958 impression). xiv + 2019 pages.

Liddell, Henry G. & Robert Scott, A Lexicon, Abridged from Liddell and Scott's Greek-English Lexicon (Oxford UP, 1891, 1953 impression). 804 pages.

Onions, C. T., A Shakespeare Glossary (Oxford: Clarendon Press, 1953).

Mathews, Mitford M. ed., A Dictionary of Americanisms on Historical Principles (University of Chicago Press, 1951). xvi + 1946 pages.

Berrey, Lester V & Melvin Van den Bark, The American Thesaurus of Slang: A Complete Reference Book of Colloquial Speech, 2nd ed. (NY: Thomas Y. Crowell, 1953, 1966). xxxv + 1272 pages.

Partridge, Eric. A Dictionary of Slang and Unconventional English, 2nd ed. (Routledge & Kegan Paul, 1938). xviii + 1051 pages [p.45].

Samuel Johnson's Dictionary: A Modern Selection, eds. E.L. McAdam Jr & G. Milne (Random House, 1965) [p.74, 78, 83].

Merriam-Webster abridged (1948). This is probably Merriam-Webster's Collegiate Dictionary, 5th ed. [p.66, #77 n.p.].

Funk & Wagnells Practical Standard Dictionary (1922) [p.72],

Larousse Dictionary: Nouveau Petit, Illustré (1932) [p.87].

Jones, David, "Notes on Some Letters of David Jones," ed. Colin Wilcockson. Agenda 14.2 (Summer 1976)

Zukofsky, Louis. Scattered references to work in All, Bottom and "A".

Note: The literary works listed above are those that LZ fairly certainly read or reread during the composition of 80 Flowers, or in some cases drew on older unused notes. However, a high proportion of the literary quotations LZ noted down and that often made their way into the poems were found indirectly, as was his common practice throughout his life. Particularly the Century Dictionary includes many sample quotations, predominantly literary, which LZ often noted. Although he obviously knew Shakespeare very well, the majority of the Shakespeare references and quotations he quotes can be traced back to the Century, although at times he also looked up the original passages since he sometimes indicates the speaker(s) or augments the quotation as it appears in the dictionary. Further Shakespeare references were found in Onions' A Shakespeare Glossary when LZ looked up obscure words or meanings. Liddell and Scott's A Greek Lexicon and Little and Short's A Latin Dictionary both include copious extensive lists of examples of usage in the classical literature, although usually only giving phrases, but again LZ at times would follow this up in his Loeb Classical Library editions and copy out more extensive quotations, which in turn usually elicited details, often homophonic renditions, that made their way into the poems.
